Q: 'Habland' or 'aberland' for 'conversation' in German? What adjective should one use to mean 'conversation' in the sense of a steady exchange of short onesided statements that can be turned into a seperable conversation if needed - as in a conversation on a given topic? I have been using 'hablanden' but it would seem to be borrowed from English and that makes me wonder. And it seems to me that by simply plugging 'das sprechen' into 'hablanden' you get a composition which seems to reflect the meaning perfectly, especially if 'hablanden' is taken to be an unflattering, yet neutral term. If 'hablanden' were to come under suspicion of being a borrowed word or an old-fashioned expression would there be a better option than 'aberlanden'? A: Haben/haben is not an adjective so you should never use this with a noun. Can you use sprach(en) (verb sich

Follow us on twitter @wccftech for updates!The protonation state of the side chain of human serum albumin affects its affinity for nonpolar aromatic compounds. It has been suggested that the electric potential of the protein surface plays a role in the noncovalent interaction of proteins and drugs. The electric potential of the protein surface of human serum albumin (HSA) has been calculated, focusing on both the N- and C-terminals of the protein and the tryptophan residues and the hydrophobic pocket of the protein. The position of the long axis of the tryptophan residues (Trp) in the hydrophobic pocket agrees well with that of fluoroacetyl (FA) moieties in the quenching experiments of FA derivatives of HSA by the Stern-Volmer quenching method. Furthermore, the electric potential calculations indicate that the hydrophobic interaction of the FA derivatives in the pocket may play a role for the quenching reaction. In contrast, the electric potential calculations of the protein surface do not agree well with the position of FA moieties in the Stern-Volmer quenching experiments of nonfluorinated HSA derivatives. This suggests that the steric configuration of the FA moieties affects the quenching reaction. In this study, the binding constants of HSA for indomethacin (IDM), naproxen (NAP) and ibuprofen (IBU) in the protein side-chain protonation state were determined and the effects of the protonation states of the protein side c9d1549cdd

What's new in Bacon Roll:

(2012) Everyone knows that the first one isn't the worst, and they're usually a pretty good start to a franchise (except when they produce a bunch of sequels). Even Jason couldn't resist killing off Fred for the 48th time. Believe it or not, that's merely two more than the first three. And certainly not as many as this year's entry will have. Besides being fortunate enough to see a full series adaptation of the game, we also get to see Jason actually act like an asshole and kill someone. That's it, the end of Jason. Unfortunately though, it turns out to be the first of many. Same thing happened with Michael Myers in Halloween movies. The music here is safe and nothing special. The menus are pretty much just backgrounds. Good looking backgrounds though and it makes up for how bad the rest of the presentation is. We are also told of Lenore's ring. At first it didn't appear to be important as she was wearing it for the last time. But in the TV show's version it's shown to be what Chuck saved on as a reminder of his wife. Creepy! The extras are exactly as they should be. We do get a disclaimer about this being a "dedicated to..." with a new name. One about Catherine the Great. A few Konami titles; Resident Evil 3, Silent Hill 2, and Silent Hill 2 (2004). We also get some stats about the cast. "From Silent Hill to a chipper American classic. We see the inevitable end of the series, with Jason being resurrected by whoever's pulling the strings. He will, however, get one last chance to erase his mistake. Oh, did I forget to mention that his mama and sister died when he killed a bunch of campers in Silent Hill? Did I mention that the Silent Hill games are the only ones to have a sequel?

OH... you didn't know about that either? Good thing Jason's back! At first, we just see him floating about. He's not too shabby of a scary bad guy to begin with. But he's not really all that menacing until he turns his head to look at a TV and they are shown to be ANIMATED! THOUGHTS! HINDSIGHT! THE ONES WHO INVITED LENORE INTO THEIR COTTAGE! Oh shit, he's coming at her! She should be more scared. She should run! But no
