ShareHouse Democrats on Monday called on U.S. authorities to investigate whether top campaign officials may have violated law by accepting tens of thousands of dollars in foreign donations, a move that casts the party in more of a light that U.S. officials warned on Friday that Russia was seeking to influence. The request to the Justice Department comes as Democrats quickly escalate public criticism of the findings of an intelligence community assessment that concluded that Russia tried to influence last year's election by hacking into Democrats' computers, releasing stolen documents and sowing doubts in the minds of voters. Sen. Dianne Feinstein, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee, said in a statement Monday that it was clear that Russia sought to influence last year's election. "The Russian government directed the systematic and unprecedented attack on our national-security agencies in the summer of 2016, and it was aimed at one goal: to help Donald Trump win the election," she said. The GOP-led House Intelligence Committee issued a scathing rebuke of the Obama administration on Friday, accusing it of failing to heed its own warnings. "A series of alleged Russian government-directed efforts to hack into the Democratic National Committee's computer systems during the 2016 election is one of the most serious attacks on our electoral system in recent history, and it appears to me to be a deliberate attempt to influence our election," Rep. Devin Nunes, the panel's chairman, said in a statement. [House GOP blasts Obama administration for downplaying Russia's election meddling] President Obama publicly condemned Moscow's meddling in a press conference Monday with British Prime Minister Theresa May. The White House said Obama and May called for a full review of the country's intelligence capabilities. "In furtherance of that review, I recently ordered a comprehensive review of our cyber infrastructure to protect our election systems and determine what we can do better going forward," Obama said. At least one member of the House Democratic caucus, Rep. Bennie Thompson of Mississippi, said he supports the call for a probe by the Justice Department. "If our own intelligence community is saying that it is Russian agents trying to influence our elections, then all of @mfinni - the netbeans build was from March 2018 and it is not supported. If you search the disk for netbeans, you will find this version is it the one you used? Can you please try to select the latest netbeans (8.2.1.9)? (Search by System, there is newer version) I'm always upgrading to newer versions, please download the latest version of netbeans and try again. Greetings. // update version 2019.3.6 // 2019.3.6 key // the url is // google.com/search?q=intellij+jetbrains // And the work

Glucocorticoid-Induced Osteonecrosis of the Femoral Head in a Pediatric Patient Treated With Chemotherapy: Case Report and Review of the Literature. Glucocorticoid-induced osteonecrosis of the femoral head is a late complication of high-dose steroid therapy in patients with systemic diseases. The main characteristics of this condition are osteonecrosis with disorganization of bone architecture in bone marrow and decreased bone mineralization. The authors present a case report of an 11-year-old boy who presented with pain in the right hip, bilateral knee, and left leg, after a chemotherapy regimen with cisplatin, vincristine, and granulocyte colony-stimulating factor. Radiological and imaging examinations revealed osteonecrosis of the right femoral head and severe diffuse osteoporosis of the pelvic, thoracic, and lumbar vertebrae.

The nutritional support in patients with acute pancreatitis. Patients with acute pancreatitis are often exposed to gastrointestinal dysfunction and energy loss. In this review we discuss the ways by which energy intake can be increased in patients with acute pancreatitis. In view of recent studies that showed that arginine and carbohydrate intake can improve the outcome of acute pancreatitis in rats, we examine the current evidence on the beneficial effects of arginine, carbohydrate and fat as nutritional support in patients with acute pancreatitis. Early enteral nutrition offers an effective way to increase energy intake, to reduce infectious complications, and to provide sufficient amino acids and carbohydrate for protein synthesis. No evidence, however, supports the use of high-caloric diets
