Johann Gottfried Bruecke Johann Gottfried Bruecke (1791–1872) was a German classical philologist and university professor. He was born in Frankfurt am Main in 1791, the son of Johann Anton Friedrich Bruecke, a lawyer and civil servant. Bruecke was a brother of Karl Anton von Brücke (1785–1825), a noted physiologist and founder of the Physiological Society. His colleague F. A. Wolf was his father's first cousin once removed.

What's New in the?

Click New to create a new composition, or click the New button on the top toolbar (see Fig. 3). The New window opens, with the Create New document item selected (see Fig. 4). Most of the editing functions and tools operate on the current composition, and not the entire Photoshop file. Create and Save You can save your work in a variety of file formats, but you must open the file before you can use Photoshop's editing tools. The most common file formats for images are TIFF, JPEG, and JPEG 2000. Your image is open in Photoshop; the New toolbar is visible at the top of the window. The most common option in the New window is Create New. The File Type drop-down list is populated with the file types listed in Step 1. Select the file type that you want to use. If you don't specify a file type, the file type defaults to JPEG and makes the image resizable. You can change the file type to almost anything Photoshop supports by selecting the type of file you want to create. For example, you can choose TIFF if you want to open an image in Photoshop and continue working with it as an image. When you save an image, you're actually saving a copy. You can select the New Image option and save a copy of your file as a different name. To save a new copy of your image, drag the cursor to the image below the New Image button. Then release the mouse button. You can also select a file format from the Format menu (see Fig. 5). It's usually a good idea to save your files with a different file name when you're working on multiple images because that way if you accidentally lose an image, you can still find it among the files you've saved. The Save File dialog box opens, with your image listed on the left. The file format (JPG in this case) is displayed on the right. Select your desired file format by clicking the type of file you want to save and then clicking Save. The original image appears at the top of the dialog box, and a preview window appears on the right. Click OK to save the file. If you choose Save As, you can navigate to your computer and name the file as you like. Clipping Mask You can "clip" the layers of
