* Can search for a domain name or IP address * Assign a hotkey to quickly identify a target * Simple to use and easy to install * Highlight relevant fields in a column * View results on the fly Do you want to send a message to your friends through your social network, even if they don't have the email app installed? There's a solution for that. Unsend is a very simple, lightweight application that makes it simple and fun to send a file to someone you know. The application, a more recent release, was first introduced back in 2013, but with a recent update it has gained more functions and new features. First, it can send a message containing a photo or video. It also provides a built-in chat app that allows you to write chat messages along with photos and videos. While it can't directly communicate with other apps, it has the ability to sync all your messages with services like Gmail, so you can use them whenever you need. How it works Unsend displays a small window on the desktop where you can drag the desired files to send. When the recipient receives your message, the file or photo is automatically opened in the default image viewer. There's also a search feature if you need to find a file faster, but don't have it on your computer yet. The application also lets you customize the app's appearance so you can give it a personal touch. You can change its icon, and set its default message formatting, so you can start sending messages immediately. The chat app doesn't require many settings to be set. You can use it to write a custom message, or select the chat protocol for instant messaging. Who should use it? It's a very useful tool for users who want to send a file or photo to someone. With the simple UI, you can quickly send your files using only a couple of clicks. This is also helpful for those who are looking for an alternative to email, since it provides an IM-like chat option. Unsend's demo video Unlike the conventional method of attaching a sound file to an email, you don't need to install any software to listen to streaming music. Since most people access the Internet using a computer, you can stream music to your device without the need of anything other than a computer that supports streaming. There are several applications that provide such service, but some are not
